Smoking Ban OK'd In District

Measure faces second vote; unclear if mayor will sign it

WASHINGTON | The D.C. Council on Tuesday voted 12-1 to ban smoking from bars, restaurants and other indoor public places.

The measure would make all restaurant eating areas smoke-free at the time of enactment, but would give bars, clubs, taverns and the bar areas of restaurants until 2007 to go smoke-free. Several members said they would push for swifter implementation of the ban during a second, final vote on the measure that could come later this month or in January.

Mayor Anthony A. Williams, a Democrat, has said he is undecided on whether he will sign the legislation.

Williams

The bill would make exemptions for outdoor areas, cigar bars, hotel rooms, retail tobacco outlets and facilities that research the effects of smoking. The bill also would provide for an economic-hardship waiver for businesses that can demonstrate a "significant, negative impact." Smoking ban advocates say that provision is a large loophole that they will try to tighten.

The council voted against a substitute bill by council member Carol Schwartz (R-At Large) that would have allowed smoking in bars and restaurants that install high-capacity air cleaners and pay higher fees. It also rejected a proposal by council member Marion Barry (D-Ward 8) to exempt bars, taverns and nightclubs. ERIC M. WEISS (THE WASHINGTON POST)

MIX-UPS | Cheesed Off In an unusual case of mistaken identity, a woman in Memphis, Tenn., who thought a block of white cheese was cocaine is charged with trying to hire a hit man to rob and kill four men. The woman also was mistaken about the hit man.

He turned out to be an undercover police officer. Jessica Sandy Booth, 18, was arrested over the weekend and remains in jail with bond set at $1 million on four charges of attempted murder and four counts of soliciting a murder. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

KARMA

Deliver Him to Evil

When Vegard Sjaastad delivered a pizza in Aalesund, Norway, on Monday, there was something familiar about the customer's credit card. That's because it was Sjaastad's stolen card — with his picture on the back. The Visa, along with Sjaastad's driver's license, was taken from his car Saturday. Sjaastad canceled the card and reported the theft. He was training a new driver on Monday, and, at the delivery, the customer with Sjaastad's credit card did not recognize him as the same man in the credit card picture. Sjaastad called police, who arrested the customer and two others. (AP)

PRISON

Hey, That's Why It's Called the Big House

A Cedar Rapids, Iowa, man who allowed his home to be used to store crack shipped by mail was sentenced to 14 years in prison, despite arguing that he was too fat to go to prison. Michael

Washington, who weighs 574 pounds, pleaded guilty in January to making his home available for the storage of crack cocaine, but said during sentencing that he was too obese to be adequately cared for in prison and requested home confinement. However, the court said the agency was capable of addressing his medical needs. (AP)

MIRACLES

Frito-Lay in a Manger

Nativity scenes pop up everywhere this time of year. Even junk food is getting in on the action, if unintentionally. John Mize of Beckley, W. Va., found this pair of Funyuns under his car seat; Mize believes the Funyuns resemble the Virgin Mary holding the baby Jesus. Of course, Mize did what any normal person would do in these circumstances: auction the snack on eBay. Last month, an anonymous bidder paid $609 for it. (AP)

LINGERIE

Plus, Santa Seemed Really Distracted

A black curtain has risen between a Roanoke, Va., shopping mall Santa and a lingerie store to shield children from skimpy undergarments on display in the store's window. The Victoria's Secret display includes a mannequin in a hot-pink thong and bra, and the slogan "Give Me Sexy." Thursday, following complaints, mall management raised the curtain to shield Santa's chair, and his young visitors, from the displays so "everyone feels comfortable," a mall spokeswoman said. (AP)

Bush: No Ransom for Iraq Hostages

President refuses to comment on secret prison allegations

WASHINGTON | President Bush said Tuesday that the United States will work for the return of captive Americans in Iraq, but will not submit to terrorist tactics. "We, of course, don't pay ransom for any hostages," Bush said.

Bush spoke on the same day that Al-Jazeera broadcast a video claiming insurgents kidnapped a U.S. security consultant, and the militants displayed a blond, Western-looking man sitting with his hands tied behind his back. The video, the authenticity of which could not be immediately confirmed, also bore the logo of the Islamic Army in Iraq and showed a U.S. passport and an identification card.

"What we will do, of course, is use our intelligence-gathering to see if we can't help locate them," Bush said. But, he said, the United States does not torture and will do everything in its legal power to protect Americans while abiding by U.S. law.

Human rights organizations and legal groups, both in the U.S. and abroad, have accused the United States of allowing a practice known as "rendition to torture," in which suspects are taken to countries such as Egypt and Saudi Arabia where harsh interrogation methods are used. The U.S. has denied that tactic, a denial Bush repeated Tuesday.

"We do not render to countries that torture," he said.

Jury Clears Charges in Terror Case

TAMPA, FLA. | In a stinging defeat for U.S. prosecutors, a former Florida professor accused of helping lead a terrorist group that has carried out suicide bombings against Israel was acquitted on nearly half the charges against him. The jury deadlocked on the rest.

The case against former University of South Florida professor Sami Al-Arian, 47, had been seen as one of the biggest courtroom tests yet of the Patriot Act's expanded powers.

After a five-month trial and 13 days of deliberations, the jury acquitted Al-Arian on Tuesday of eight of the 17 counts against him, including a key charge of conspiring to maim and murder people overseas. The jurors deadlocked on other charges, including aiding terrorists. MITCH STACY (AP)

Katrina Victims Allege Racism Delayed Aid

Storm's survivors say Gulf residents suffered from "abject neglect"

WASHINGTON | Black survivors of Hurricane Katrina said Tuesday that racism contributed to the slow disaster response, at times likening themselves in emotional congressional testimony to victims of genocide and the Holocaust.

The comparison is inappropriate, according to Republican Congressman Jeff Miller of Florida.

"Not a single person was marched into a gas chamber and killed," Miller told the survivors.

"They died from abject neglect," retorted community activist Leah Hodges.

A House committee held the meeting to look into federal preparation and response to Katrina. Democratic Congresswoman Cynthia McKinney of Georgia, a Congressional Black Caucus member, requested the meeting.

"The world saw the effects of American-style racism in the drama as it was outplayed by the Katrina survivors," McKinney said.

Justices Poised To OK Recruiters

Supreme Court cites law over federal funds to allow campus access

WASHINGTON | The Supreme Court appeared ready Tuesday to rule against colleges that want to limit military recruiting on campus to protest the Pentagon's policy on gays.

New Chief Justice John Roberts and other court members signaled support for a law that says schools that accept federal money also have to accommodate military recruiters. The justices seemed concerned about hindering a Defense Department need to fill its ranks when the nation is at war.

"There's the right in the Constitution to raise a military," Roberts said.

Law schools have become the latest battleground over the "don't ask, don't tell" policy disallowing gay men and women to outspokenly serve in the military.

A group of law schools and professors claim their free-speech rights are being violated because they are forced to host military recruiters.

Many law schools forbid the participation of recruiters from public agencies and private companies that have discriminatory policies.

Ford Pulls Ads in Gay Mags but Denies Bias

DETROIT | Ford Motor Co. said Tuesday its luxury Jaguar and Land Rover brands will no longer advertise in gay publications, but the nation's second-largest automaker denied that it made the decision under pressure from conservative Christian groups.

Jaguar and Land Rover, which are part of Ford's money-losing Premier

Automotive Group, have decided to cut back on their advertising everywhere because of difficult market conditions. Ford's move came nearly a week after the Tupelo, Miss.-based American Family Association canceled a boycott of Ford vehicles that began in May, when the group criticized Ford for being too gay-friendly. Fighting Post-Katrina Blues

Post-traumatic stress, holiday depression hit
some hurricane victims

NEW ORLEANS | For three months after Hurricane Katrina's waters consumed her home, Michelle Thomas locked her stress deep inside and put on a brave face for her husband and two daughters.

She focused on the positive: Her Ninth Ward home was destroyed and her hospital job was gone, but her husband and children were alive and the family was together.

But as Christmas approaches, the 36-year-old is feeling anything but joyful. Like many survivors, Thomas has the blues.

"I go into a feeling of hopelessness, and I cry," she says.

The holiday season may make dealing with Katrina's fallout even tougher, mental health experts say, especially when there are few doctors or counselors to help people deal with the loss of homes, jobs and lives.

Dr. Lisa Osberg-Wilson's story took a more tragic turn. Her New

THE DAMAGE DONE: The storm's destruction, as seen on this New Orleans East street, has increased cases of depression and led many victims to seek counseling.

Orleans home and nearby dermatology practice weren't damaged in the hurricane. But most of her patients fled, and she missed her three little girls, who were living with relatives in Texas. Every day, on her commute to and from work, she drove by the destruction, perhaps worrying about the debt for a new office she was building.

Osberg-Wilson killed herself

Nov. 4, three days after her 45th birthday.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services estimates that the storm's rampant, lingering destruction has left about half a million people — both survivors and the emergency workers who went to their aid — potentially in need of mental health services.

U.S. Postal Service Is Now Debt-Free

WASHINGTON | The Postal Service is in a position not many Americans can claim: debt free. But even a projected surplus won't stop next month's postal hike, which the service says is needed to cover certain expenses.

Once $11 billion in the red, the post office paid off the remaining

$1.8 billion of its debt in 2005, postal Chief Financial Officer Richard Strasser said Tuesday.

Overall, the Postal Service finished fiscal 2005 with a $1.4 billion surplus. It's the first time the Postal Service has been without debt since it was organized from the old post office in the 1970s.

Strasser said the agency's plan for 2006 was for a $1.3 billion surplus, but a requirement that it place $3 billion in escrow is forcing it to raise postal rates on Jan. 8 to cover the added expense. The price of a first-class stamp will go from 37 cents to 39 cents and other rates will rise accordingly. (AP)

Plane Crashes in Tehran, Killing 115

Military craft tries emergency landing, hits apartment homes

TEHRAN, IRAN | A military plane loaded with Iranian journalists crashed into a 10-story apartment building Tuesday as the pilot attempted an emergency landing after developing engine trouble. At least 115 people died, the Tehran police chief said.

The C-130, a four-engine turbo-prop, crashed in the Azari suburb of Tehran, site of the Towhid apartment complex that is home to air force personnel and near Tehran's Mehrabad airport.

Before firefighters extinguished the blaze, flames roared from the roof and windows in several of the upper floors. Panicked residents fled the building. Police held back a crowd of thousands, many of them screaming and weeping that they had to find friends or loved ones who were in the building.

Several hours after the crash, the building still was smoldering, with black smoke hanging in the air.

Twenty-one people in the apartment building also died and 90 were injured, Tehran state radio said.

U.S. Said to Admit Error On Suspect

Merkel claims Rice doesn't deny mistake in German's detention

BERLIN | German Chancellor Angela Merkel said Tuesday that the United States has admitted making a mistake in the case of a German national who claimed he was wrongfully imprisoned by the CIA.

Merkel spoke during a press conference with Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, who refused to discuss specifics with reporters. The leaders' first meeting was dominated by questions about U.S. terrorism policies, including the five-month detention of Lebanese-born Khaled al-Masri and reports of secret CIA prisons and potentially illegal use of European airports.

"The American administration is not denying" it erred in the case of al-Masri, Merkel said through a translator.

Al-Masri filed a lawsuit in Washington on Tuesday, claiming he was held captive and tortured by U.S. government agents after being mistakenly identified as an associate of the Sept. 11 hijackers.

Later, in Romania, Rice tried to allay European suspicions about U.S. practices in the pursuit of terrorists, even as she secured new rights for American use of a military base suspected to have housed a secret CIA prison.

She refused to say whether the base ever served as a secret holding pen, and she sidestepped questions about al-Masri. ANNE GEARAN (AP)

Ex-Official Faces Rape Charges in South Africa

Allegations may end popular politician's presidential ambitions

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA | South Africa's popular former deputy president, already facing corruption charges, was indicted for rape Tuesday in a case that could destroy his chances of taking the helm of a country seen as a political and economic model across the continent.

Jacob Zuma, who was dismissed from government but remains No. 2 of the governing African National Congress, declared his innocence but said he was voluntarily withdrawing from his party's leadership structures for the duration of the trial.

Zuma was formally indicted at a special early morning session in Johannesburg Magistrate's Court and was released on $3,075 bail, the National Prosecuting Authority said. Trial was set for Feb. 13.

Zuma stands accused of assaulting a 31-year-old family friend at his residence on Nov. 2 after she declined his offer of a massage, according to the charge sheet. The alleged victim's identity was not disclosed.

"I wish to state clearly that I am innocent of these charges," Zuma said in a statement after the brief appearance. ALEXANDRA ZAVIS (AP)

Group Rigs Bombs On Spanish Roads

MADRID, SPAIN | Five small bombs exploded on highways near the Spanish capital Tuesday following a warning call from the armed Basque group ETA, the Interior Ministry said. No one was injured and there was little damage.

Earlier, a small bomb exploded outside a post office in the northern town of Alsasua, also causing no injuries and little damage. No one claimed responsibility for that blast, but police blamed ETA.

The explosions occurred on a major national holiday commemorating the 27th anniversary of the constitution, which the right has said is what maintains Spanish unity. ETA is seeking an independent Basque state in the north.

The explosions caused major traffic delays for millions of Spaniards who had taken to the roads for brief holiday trips. (AP)

New Abuse Claims at Trial

Saddam tells judges to 'go to hell,' says he won't return to court

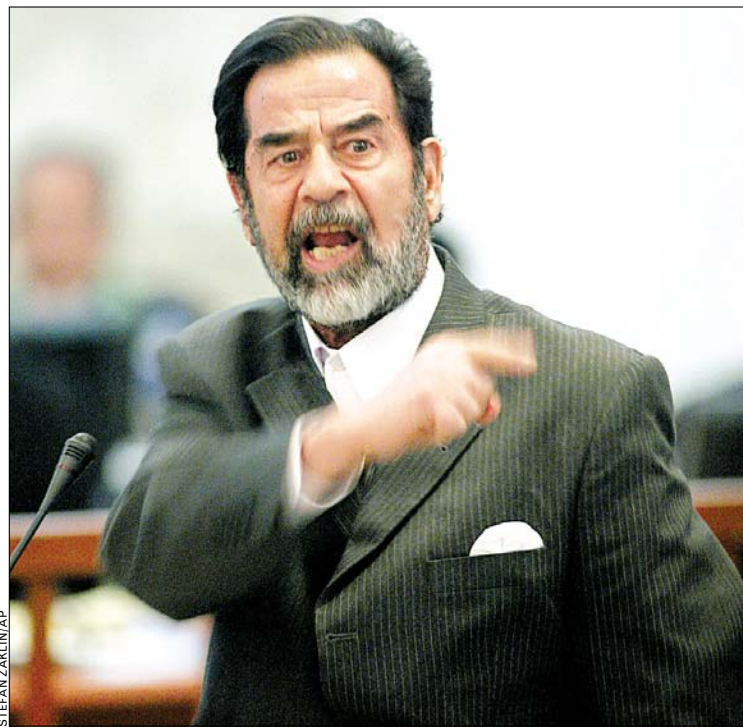

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | A woman testified at the Saddam Hussein trial Tuesday behind a beige curtain and with her voice disguised, telling the court of beatings, torture and sexual humiliation she said she suffered at the hands of security agents when she was a teenager.

The ousted Iraqi president sat stone-faced and silent during the woman's testimony but later exploded with anger. Waving a finger and pounding his desk, he told the judges to "go to hell" and vowed not to return to court when the trial resumes Wednesday.

Saddam complained that he and the seven other defendants were tired and had been deprived of opportunities to shower, have a change of clothes, exercise or go for a smoke. "This is terrorism," he said.

The defendants are charged in the deaths of more than 140 Shiite Muslims in retaliation for an assassination attempt against him in the town of Dujail in 1982.

Five witnesses testified in the fourth session of the trial. The most dramatic testimony came from the woman identified only as "Witness A," who was a 16-year-old girl at the time of the crackdown. Her voice breaking with emotion, she told the court of beatings and electric shocks by the former president's agents.

"I was forced to take off my clothes, and he raised my legs up and tied my hands. He continued administering electric shocks and whipping me and telling me to speak," Witness A said of Wadah al-Sheik, an Iraqi intelligence officer who died of cancer last month.

Such treatment of a young woman is gravely offensive in Arab culture, and Saddam was careful to avoid any insulting gesture in Tuesday's session, which was televised in Iraq. HAMZA HENDAWI (AP)

43 Die in Twin Iraqi Bombings

2 suicide attackers trigger blasts inside main police academy

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Two suicide bombers detonated explosives inside Baghdad's main police academy Tuesday, killing at least 43 people and wounding more than 70, police said. Al Qaeda in Iraq claimed responsibility for the attack, the capital's deadliest in months.

The bombing came as Al-Jazeera aired an insurgent video claiming to have kidnapped a U.S. security consultant and the U.S. military reported another American soldier killed in a roadside bombing in Baghdad.

Late Tuesday, another suicide bomber blew himself up in a cafe frequented by police in a Shiite neighborhood, killing three people and wounding 20, police said.

A statement on an Islamist Web site in the name of al Qaeda in Iraq said "two blessed brothers" staged the attack on the academy "which continues to produce the dogs that shed the blood and violate the honor of Sunni Muslims." The claim's authenticity could not be independently verified. (AP)

Catlike Animal May Be New Species

Creature caught on tape twice on Borneo Island, group reports

JAKARTA, INDONESIA | A catlike creature photographed by camera traps on Borneo Island is likely to be a new species of carnivore, the World Wildlife Fund said Tuesday.

If confirmed, the animal — which has dark red fur and a long, bushy tail — would be first new carnivore species discovered on the island since 1895, when the Borneo ferret-badger was found, the fund said.

wildlife in Kayan Mentarang National Park on the Indonesian side of Borneo Island have twice captured images of the animal, said Stephan Wulffraat, a Dutch biologist who is coordinating the fund's research into the species.

"We have consulted several Bornean wildlife experts. Some thought it looked like a lemur, but most were convinced it was a new species of carnivore," Wulffraat said. "Until we have a live specimen in our hands, we can't be 100 percent sure. Now, I'm only 90 percent sure," he said.

The WWF is trying to catch a live specimen using traps, he said.

Since 1994, researchers have found more than 360 new species on Borneo Island, which is shared by Malaysia, Indonesia and Brunei, most of them insects and plants. (AP)

Don't Breathe Filth

Are you breathing polluted indoor air?

FACT: Children and the elderly are especially affected by polluted indoor air. (Department of Consumer Affairs)

FACT: The levels of hazardous pollutants in indoor air has been found to be up to 70 times greater than in outdoor air. (EPA)

FACT: 50% of all illnesses are caused by polluted indoor air. (American College of Allergists)

FACT: One out of six people who suffer from allergies do so because of the direct relationship to fungi and bacteria in air duct systems. (Total Health Magazine)

Dust, dirt, pollen, animal dander and other air-borne contaminants are pulled into your duct system every time the furnace or air conditioner runs.

These contaminants build up inside the ductwork over time and can help make your duct system a breeding ground for mold spores, bacteria, fungus, mildew and other microbes.

Each time the furnace or air conditioner is turned on, contaminants are spewed out and circulated throughout your home and affect the health and comfort of your family.

Family members who suffer from allergies, asthma or other respiratory ailments as well as children and the elderly are especially vulnerable to the effects of indoor air pollutants.

The removal of contaminants from the entire HVAC system is recognized by industry experts as the most effective way to eliminate air duct pollutants. This is referred to as the "source removal" method of duct cleaning.

In addition to the obvious health benefits, ducts cleaning can help you maintain a cleaner home. It also helps to restore HVAC system capacity and lessen running time, resulting in lower heating and cooling bills.

The HEPA-AIRE method used by our company assures you that your ducts are being cleaned with the most advanced source removal equipment available.

Mayor: Stadium Won't Cost $700M

Williams holds firm to $535M for ballpark

WASHINGTON | D.C. Mayor Anthony A. Williams restated his commitment Tuesday to spending no more than $535 million for a proposed Washington Nationals stadium.

Williams and D.C. Sports and Entertainment Commission Chairman Mark Tuohey spoke to reporters amid reports that independent Chief Financial Officer Natwar Ghandi's estimates for the stadium project had soared to $700 million, including financing and infrastructure costs.

"Under no circumstances will this stadium cost $700 million," Williams said. "This is inaccurate. This has been seized on by the same vocal minority that has opposed the stadium."

The two spoke before the D.C. Council narrowly rejected emergency legislation that would have capped city spending for the stadium at $535 million.

The vote was 8-5, one vote short of what is needed to pass emergency legislation.

The council will get another chance to review stadium financing next week when it votes on a stadium lease.

Williams

The city and Major League Baseball tentatively agreed on the deal last weekend. Approval by the council is needed before city financial officials can sell construction bonds. Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig has said he will not name a new owner for the Nationals until the lease is approved.

Williams and Tuohey disagreed with council members who believe that costs for infrastructure improvements, Metro station upgrades and a possible underground parking garage should be paid for by the $535 million bond issue that the council approved last year to pay for the project.

Williams said he will find other ways to pay those costs.

After Baker's Execution, 7 Await Their Deaths

Inmates appealing sentences say capital punishment is illegal

BALTIMORE | Several of Maryland's inmates sentenced to death are late in the legal process of trying to stave off execution and one could face a death warrant soon, although defense attorneys say significant issues still need resolution before another inmate is put to death.

Following Monday's execution of Wesley Baker, seven men await execution, including three who committed their crimes more than 20 years ago.

Two inmates, Heath Burch and Vernon Evans, even had execution dates set, although those orders were postponed to give them time to file extra appeals.

Those who have faced execution the longest have filed numerous appeals. Almost all also argue the state's death statute is illegal based on a recent study of capital punishment in Maryland.

Baker

Baker, 47, was put to death by lethal injection Monday. He became the fifth person to be executed in Maryland since the death penalty was reinstated in the 1970s.

Three other men have been on Maryland's unofficial death row longer than Baker, who was sentenced in 1992.

Grandison, Evans and John Booth-el, were all sentenced to death in 1984. All three had their death sentences overturned but later reinstated. STEPHEN MANNING (AP)

WASHINGTON | A Brinks security guard and an innocent bystander were shot during a botched bank robbery Tuesday but neither was seriously hurt, authorities said.

Economic Gains Continue

Factory orders, worker productivity increase in latest sign of growth

WASHINGTON | Orders to U.S. factories increased at a healthy pace in October, and third-quarter productivity shot up by the largest amount in two years.

The two government reports Tuesday provided fresh evidence that the economy is bouncing back from the devastating Gulf Coast hurricanes and the late summer spike in energy prices.

The Commerce Department reported that orders for manufactured goods rose by 2.2 percent to a seasonally adjusted $399.8 billion in October following a 1.4 percent September decline that was blamed on disruptions from the hurricanes and a strike at aircraft giant Boeing.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said the productivity of U.S. workers, the biggest factor determining future living standards, raced up at an annual rate of 4.7 percent in the July-September quarter, the best showing in two years.

The stronger increase in productivity, which was revised upward from an initial estimate of 4.1 percent, helped to push down labor costs, which fell by 1 percent in the third quarter, double the 0.5 percent decline initially reported.

The improved productivity and falling labor costs should ease fears at the Federal Reserve that wage pressures will make inflation worse. Fed policy-makers, who meet next week, are expected to nudge interest rates up by a quarter-point, the 13th such move since June 2004.

Despite the productivity gains, income growth has lagged behind for middle and low-income workers, reflecting in part increased competition from low-wage countries as the U.S. trade deficit has soared to record levels. MARTIN CRUTSINGER (AP)

NBC to Offer Hit TV Shows on iTunes

SAN JOSE, CALIF. | NBC Universal has inked a deal with Apple Computer Inc. to become the second network to sell television shows a la carte on Apple's online iTunes store, the companies announced Tuesday.

More than 300 episodes from about a dozen prime time, cable, late-night and classic TV shows are now available for $1.99 apiece, viewable on computers or downloadable on the latest, video-capable iPod.

PAUL SAKUMA/AP

NBC will join ABC in selling selected TV shows online via Apple's iTunes.

The programming spans from the 1950s to the present, including shows from "Alfred Hitchcock Presents," USA Network's "Monk," and NBC's hit series "Law & Order." Sketches from "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" and "Late Night with Conan O'Brien" are also for sale.

Apple unleashed a dramatically different way of distributing TV shows when it debuted videos for sale on its iTunes Music Store on Oct. 20 with Walt Disney Co.'s ABC as its first network partner. Customers have since downloaded more than three million videos. (AP)

LOTUS SPEEDERS: Lotus Cars announced Tuesday that it is relauching the Europa line with the Europa S. Like the original, the new Europa will be light—less than 2,200 pounds—and fast (0-60 mph in about 5.5 seconds), the company said.

Not Garages — Motor Homes

These luxury condos are clubs where pricey cars live and drive

Ralph H. Doering III just bought a new condo in Oakland Park, Fla. Like many upscale developments, the property boasts such amenities as a lounge for entertaining with a catering kitchen and wine storage, a guest office with Internet access, and even an art gallery and photography studio.

Doering, a real-estate company executive, has no plans to live in the condo development, however. But his car will.

The new development, called the DreamCar Carriage House, is an "auto-minium" for luxury cars. Spaces start at about $50,000.

A rising number of membership clubs and high-end garages are catering to collector cars and the enthusiasts who drive them. Some clubs own their own fleets so members can try out different cars. The business models vary, but they generally feature posh amenities, ranging from private driving courses and climate-controlled garages (some with Web-cams so you can view your car in storage at your desktop computer) to luxury meeting spaces for parties and such as the Autobahn Country Club in Joliet, Ill., which opened in April; the Alpine Motorsports Club, which is being developed in Pennsylvania's Poconos region; and Valley Motorsports Park, being built in Tamworth, N.H. The clubs are designed so that members can see what their sports cars are capable of doing — without traffic or fear of a speeding ticket.

David Gaber, a retired commodities trader, is an Autobahn Country Club member who owns a Ferrari 360 challenge race car and a titanium Ferrari 550 for street use. He says he has driven his race car at top speeds of about 150 miles an hour at the club. "What I find exciting is going into a turn at 120, then tapping the breaks and taking the turn at 90," Gaber said. RACHEL EMMA SILVERMAN (WALL STREET JOURNAL)

SPY FOX: Pictures of the 2006 VW Fox MPV have been circulating on the Internet after their publication in a South American magazine (no word yet on where it's going to be released). General reaction from car commentators so far: It's hideous.

Wide Open Spaces — Inside

The 2006 Explorer is big and fully loaded. Can you handle it?

Welcome to the Michelin Man's rec room. Sit back in one of the marshmallow seats. Kick off your Keds.

The GMC Explorer van just might be the ultimate ride, a big rollicking party on wheels, complete with a Las Vegas-style chandelier, high ceiling and a 26-inch high-definition television.

That's right, satellite TV in your car. After all, if you're going to be stuck in traffic with four kids and a dog, you might as well have TV, not to mention a cooler in your armrest.

The GMC Explorer van is really big. You can look down on Hummers and Suburbans, if you can imagine that. You probably can't.

You'll drive round and round the market parking lot looking for a space big enough. The Explorer van enters a parking lot the way a professional basketball player enters

The GMC Explorer van is basically a cargo van turned into your college son's vision of what his dorm room should look like.

Out go the regular dashboard, seats and surface components. In come such luxe touches as a tri-fold power sofa bed, six-CD changer, window valances and loads of indirect lighting.

This pimp-my-ride remake also includes Scotchgarded fabrics and carpets, TV and video game hook-ups and reclining captain chairs. And, oh, those chairs, as comfortable as any living room recliner, are overstuffed and skinned with Scandinavian glove leather, which Explorer touts as the most expensive auto grade leather in the world.

Families can take it on trips to the beach, loading up coolers, boogie boards and six people with room to spare.

This big conversion van is mass transit at its most personal level. Not for everybody. Probably not even for you. CHRIS ERSKINE (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

My husband and I are contemplating the purchase of a new Jetta TDI diesel. We're also interested in running it on biodiesel. What do you think of the new Jetta diesels? Do you have any opinion about biodiesel fuel?

I think the VW diesels are marvelous. Biodiesel is fine, except for the additional cost in most areas.

I have a 1999 Chevy Suburban. The check engine light's on, and the code response says it's transmission slip. The shift from first to second is also a little hard. Are you aware of weakness or propensity for this transmission's failure?

Don't find too many problems with the transmissions themselves, but we find huge problems with slipping torque converter clutches. Usually the check engine light signifies this problem.

Teenage star settles differences with D.C. over his playing time

UNITED | Freddy Adu and D.C. United say they have settled their differences, essentially ensuring that the 16-year-old forward will return to the Major League Soccer club for a third season this spring.

In his first media interview in seven weeks, Adu told The Washington Post: "We laid everything on the table and everything is resolved. It's over and now we can concentrate on winning the championship again."

In mid-October, three days before United's playoff opener, Adu had complained about his playing time and suggested he would be better off playing elsewhere next year. United officials, upset by Adu's comments during a critical stage of the season, responded by suspending him for the first playoff match.

Adu played in the subsequent game, a season-ending loss to Chicago, but the situation remained unresolved until issues were addressed at a recent meeting in Bethesda attended by Adu and family members; one of his agents, Dan Segal; the league's deputy commissioner, Ivan Gazidis; and United executives Kevin Payne and Dave Kasper.

MAKE UP: Freddy Adu, right, will have a chance to rejoice with D.C. United teammates next year after reconciling with the club.

Adu then met with Coach Peter Nowak last week in Florida.

"It's not so much what Peter told me, it's what I got out of it," Adu said in a telephone interview from Bradenton, Fla., where he has begun off-season training. "There were misunderstandings between both sides and we settled that. I don't want to go into specifics and details, but it's behind us now."

Asked if he regretted his comments before the playoffs, Adu said: "I don't want to go back and talk about that and dwell on it. What happened is past now and that's that. I'm glad everything is OK with D.C. United, I'm happy to be going back to D.C. United and getting ready to play because I love D.C. United."

A.J. Burnett is part of a plan Toronto has to compete in the tough A.L. East.

Burnett Becomes A Blue Jay

Fireballer bypasses Nationals, Cardinals for $55 million deal

BASEBALL | The Toronto Blue Jays kept up their spending spree on Tuesday by agreeing to terms with starter A.J. Burnett on a $55 million, five-year contract

The deal was announced at baseball's winter meetings just hours after the team gave general manager J.P. Ricciardi a three-year contract extension to keep him in Toronto through 2010. "He's got one of the best arms in baseball," Toronto manager John Gibbons said. "I just think he'll fit in perfect."

It was the second major free agent signing this offseason for Ricciardi, who gave closer B.J. Ryan a $47 million, five-year deal last week that is the richest ever for a reliever.

The 28-year-old with a 98 mph fastball and a no-hitter on his resume, was the top starter available on the free-agent market. Burnett was also sought by St. Louis and the Washington Nationals. He is 49-50 in his career, all with Florida.

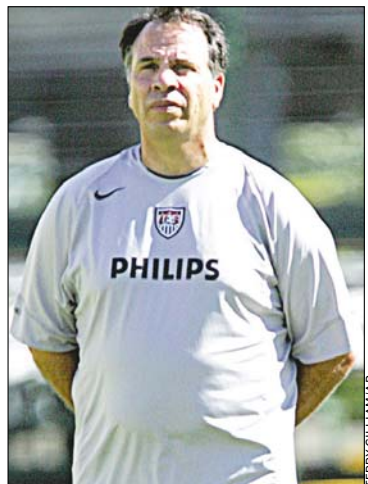

The Blue Jays are planning to increase their payroll from $45 million to $75 million in an effort to improve a team that went 80-82 last year and finished third in the AL East behind the big-payroll New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox. (AP)

U.S. Just Misses Seed in World Cup

Americans could face tough road once the draw is held on Friday

WORLD CUP | The United States came within a point Tuesday of being one of the seeded teams for next year's World Cup. Under the draw procedure approved by the FIFA World Cup Organizing Committee, the U.S. team wound up just behind Argentina and Italy.

U.S. coach Bruce Arena wasn't surprised to miss out. "I thought all along the draw is going to be difficult. The field is extremely strong," he said. "I think it's considerably stronger than what we saw in 2002."

The Americans can't meet a team from Asia in the first round of next year's tournament in Germany. There's a good chance they will get two European opponents and one from South America or Africa.

While the draws for the 1998 and 2002 World Cups took into account performance in the three previous tournaments along with FIFA's rankings, the formula was changed slightly for Friday's draw and was based on the prior two World Cups and the rankings.

Defending champion Brazil was first in the new formula with 64 points, followed by England (51), Spain (50), Germany (48), Mexico (47), France (46) and Argentina and Italy (44 apiece). Those eight seeded teams will be placed together in Pot One for Friday's draw, and they can't meet each other in the first round.

The U.S., a quarterfinalist at the 2002 World Cup, was ninth with 43 points, followed by the Netherlands (38). RAF CASERT (AP)

Ovechkin Finds His Groove

Rookie puts slump in the past as Caps ready to host the Predators

CAPITALS | Alex Ovechkin signaled his emergence from the first "slump" of a blossoming career Saturday night with a thunderous check, and celebrated in the Capitals locker room afterward with thunderous techno music.

In between, he tormented the New York Rangers with a couple of big hits, his first goal in seven games and three scintillating assists, propelling the Caps to a 5-1 win that ended the team's five-game skid.

Washington (9-15-2) and its reborn rookie look to build on that performance tonight at MCI Center against the Nashville Predators (17-4-3). "I worked hard in practice and was staying after practice and shooting it," Ovechkin said Saturday. "A couple of games I think about it and today I just think, you'll score and you must play hard and don't think about scoring."

Moments after upending a Ranger forward in open ice midway through the first period, Ovechkin broke his 400-plus minute goalless streak with an unassisted tally. His joy was evident. He set up Dainius Zubrus with a perfect cross four minutes later. The Caps led 4-0 thanks to two more goals created by Ovechkin, who on both occasions skated around and through grasping defenders before finding a teammate. Rangers defenseman Michal Rozsival said Ovechkin (16 goals, 13 assists) was "pretty much carrying this team."

Goaltender Olie Kolzig certainly did his part, saving 37 shots, and the defense did well limiting the quality of New York's chances.

But it started with Ovechkin, who "provides a lot of energy and excitement," according to Kolzig. "He hadn't scored in six games but you wouldn't know it. He still has the same demeanor, walks around with his head high, he's not breaking his stick in practice. He still enjoys the game. And obviously when he scores, we win. It's not a coincidence." BRIAN STRAUS

Colonials Out to Own D.C. Hoops

GW topples Maryland again, aims for return trip to NCAA tourney

COLLEGE HOOPS | After beating Maryland in straight years in the BB&T Classic, George Washington is making the case that they deserve recognition as the D.C. area's college basketball powerhouse.

"We're trying to be D.C.'s college basketball team. If you live in the District, you have a team to root for. That's what we're trying to do," said coach Karl Hobbs said.

With a strong 78-70 win over the Terrapins on Monday night, the 19th-ranked Colonials are well on their way to taking more of that spotlight inside the beltway.

Atlantic 10 champions last year, and already 5-0 this year, George Washington is putting itself "in a position to have a special season," Hobbs said. "We're trying to get back to the NCAA tournament."

They certainly have the talent for it. Led by senior forward Mike Hall and his 17 points a game, the Colonials have a mix of older and younger talent, including junior guard Danilo Pinnoch and sophomore guard Maureece Rice, both of whom are averaging more than 15 points a game.

And, with five other seniors on the team, Hobbs mostly credits the strong start to experience.

"Our team has a lot of depth," said junior guard Carl Elliott. "So we don't have to be careful about how aggressive we are."

Even with that senior-stocked bench, Hobbs said, the Colonials have certain areas to improve on if they are to maintain a presence on the national stage. "We have to maintain our poise," he said. "Our defense has got to get better. We still have to get more physical in the interior. We've got to tighten that up."

The Baltimore Orioles traded left-handed reliever Steve Kline to the San Francisco Giants for right-handed reliever LaTroy Hawkins on Tuesday. Former Boston Red Sox manager Grady Little was hired Tuesday to manage the Los Angeles Dodgers, who had been without a field boss for more than two months. Little was second-guessed in Boston for leaving Pedro Martinez in too long in Game 7 of the 2003 ALCS, which the New York Yankees won. Little was fired shortly thereafter. (AP)

A Perfect Question for Colts' Dungy

Coach must weigh 16-0 record vs. risk of injury

NFL | Tony Dungy treats the mounting questions like he's a politician.

Everyone wants to know how the Indianapolis Colts cope with the pressure of staying perfect one more week. Dungy usually responds with a tactful touch.

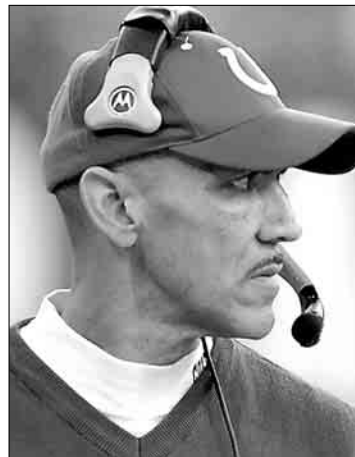

But there is one question that makes the Colts' coach groan: Will he continue playing starters if the Colts clinch the AFC South title, a first-round bye and home-field advantage this weekend?

"I don't think too far ahead, but I do everything I can to win," he said with a chuckle. "If we're fortunate enough to win, I'll do what I do every week. I'll ask for some wisdom from the Lord and pray that they don't get hurt."

At 12-0, they've already secured a playoff spot. A win at Jacksonville Sunday would give them the division title, a first-round bye and home-field advantage for the playoffs — making their game in Seattle on Dec. 24 their final one on the road.

Playing it safe might be the only remaining obstacle between the Colts and a perfect season.

If Dungy tries to go for the perfect record and a player like Peyton Manning gets hurt, he'll forever be second-guessed. But the same thing could happen if he decides against a chance at an undefeated season — a mark held by the 1972 Miami Dolphins. "Those guys want to play, and they want to play all the time," Dungy said. "We don't let them vote, but we will take into consideration how they feel." MICHAEL MAROT (AP)

Mike McMahon and Koy Detmer struggled at QB for the Eagles on Monday night.

Things Go From Bad to Worse in Philadelphia

NFL | Now the Philadelphia Eagles have a quarterback controversy.

A disastrous season filled with injuries and the Terrell Owens saga got even worse for the reigning NFC champions following an embarrassing 42-0 loss to the Seattle Seahawks on Monday night.

Not only did they lose running back Brian Westbrook for the season with a foot injury, Mike McMahon and Koy Detmer played horribly.

McMahon, who started his third game for the injured Donovan McNabb, was benched after throwing two interceptions that were returned for touchdowns. Detmer wasn't much better, throwing two picks and losing a fumble.

Coach Andy Reid hasn't decided which of the two mediocre quarterbacks will start Sunday when the Eagles (5-7) host the NFC East-leading New York Giants (8-4).

"I want the best guy out there to do the job," Reid said Tuesday.

How Zhang Ziyi undertook a grueling 'Geisha' education

CULTURE CLASH | Though Zhang Ziyi may not be a household name in America, moviegoers may recall her powerful martial arts performances in "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon," "Hero," "House of Flying Daggers" and "Rush Hour 2." Now the actress takes on her biggest challenge: playing the title role in the period drama "Memoirs of a Geisha," based on Arthur Golden's best seller.

Set in pre-World War II Japan, "Geisha" tells the story of Chiyo, a poor peasant girl sent to Kyoto to work as a servant in a geisha house. She grows up to become a geisha herself, renamed Sayuri, and learns the sad reality that for all their accomplishments, these high-class escorts are not free to love or pursue their own destiny.

Were you familiar with the culture?

No. I didn't know anything about geishas. I learned about it for this movie. I discovered how respected they are in Japan.

Were you surprised when director Rob Marshall approached you?

HIGH HEELS: With "Geisha," Chinese actress Zhang Ziyi took on the challenge of immersing herself in another culture.

Yeah. I was totally shocked and happily surprised. After a while, I began to feel tremendous pressure because I know people will compare the book to the movie. You can't let them have any regrets.

How did you put that out of your mind while you were filming?

We had two months of rehearsal prior to shooting. I had to learn everything: the small gestures, how to talk, how to bow. Also, I had to work on my English. That was a big obstacle for me.

What was the hardest thing about playing this character?

It was the emotional aspect. Sayuri is hard enough for a native speaker, but because the character is rich and compact, you have to hold back. You have to control your feelings.

How difficult was it to dance in eight-inch platform sandals?

[Laughs] That was incredible. The first time I walked in the rehearsal room and saw the platforms, I thought, that must be a prop. Then, John [DeLuca], our choreographer, told me I had to dance in them. I said, "You've got to be kidding."

Do you think that someday you'll write your memoirs?

Oh. I've never thought about that. It would be interesting. ANGELA DAWSON (VNU ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

New-wave band INXS rises again with a bland new singer

MUSIC | Irresistible a gimmick as it was, watching INXS turn the search for a successor to the late Michael Hutchence into yet another reality show had the feel of tragedy breeding tragedy. Elvis impersonator J.D. Fortune, a Canadian chosen to join the Aussie quintet, makes his debut on "Switch" (Epic) with the questionable taste you'd expect: by aping Hutchence's sultry growl, minus the dead star's ability to transcend clichés with charisma. Yet this first track manages to capture at least some of the excitement INXS' Stonesque rock-funk always generated, and so does the next effort, "Pretty Vegas." You begin wondering if this just might work.

Then "Hot Girls" snaps you back to reality with an ugly glimpse of the lowest-common-denominator tastemakers driving this project. Fortune does gradually discard his Hutchence affectations; the bad news is, the guy he'd rather emulate is Rob Thomas. And by the close of "Switch," Fortune and the song doctors, whose fingerprints are all over these catchy, personality-challenged tracks, have turned INXS into Matchbox 20, with every new-wave quirk buffed away to please the waiting masses.

This once-proud band deserves better. So do you. DAN LEROY (THE HARTFORD COURANT)

Lucky J.D. Fortune won the chance of a lifetime — to be the butt of jokes.

Riotous Laughs

The late Bill Hicks, the angriest man in comedy, now on DVD

COMEDY | Bill Hicks, the most scathing comedian of his generation, died 11 years ago at age 32, but he hasn't gone away. On the contrary, the shifting sands of history have granted an eerie afterlife to some of his material.

Since his death from pancreatic cancer, eight CDs have been issued by the Rykodisc label. This week, the company put out "Sane Man," a DVD featuring a restored and expanded version of a 1989 show.

It's no surprise that rock musicians were among Hicks' biggest fans, but as Brett Butler notes, "For all the talk about Bill being like Hendrix or Dylan or Jim Morrison or Lenny Bruce, it was Jesus Bill wanted to be. He wanted to save us all."

Brought up in Texas in a Southern Baptist family, Hicks observed the techniques of the preacher and was fascinated by the rock theatrics of Kiss and Alice Cooper. He started entertaining classmates at age 13, hit the Houston comedy clubs as a high school kid and was soon blowing the grown-ups off the stage.

Hicks' real vehemence was reserved for the alarmist mass media, the government, corporations and organized religion — institutions he saw promoting hypocrisy and mediocrity: "By the way, if anyone here is in advertising or marketing, [pause] kill yourself."

But Hicks wasn't a mere rant-er. During the volatile set titled "Revelations" on the "Live" DVD, he shifts the tone with the skill of a seasoned preacher, bringing you in close as a news anchorman delivering "a positive LSD story."

"Today a young man on acid realized that all matter is merely energy condensed to a slow vibration, that we are all one consciousness experiencing itself subjectively ... Here's Tom with the weather."

RICHARD CROMELIN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

'Cinderella' a Ball on DVD

DISCS | "Cinderella Man" tells a boxing story we've all heard before: Fighter gets knocked down, fighter struggles, fighter ultimately triumphs. Still, this gripping film manages to rise above other inside-the-ring tales, thanks to superb performances from Russell Crowe and Paul Giamatti, deft and sensitive direction by Ron Howard and the knowledge that what's unfolding onscreen isn't just Hollywood hokum.

GEORGE KRATZCHYK

Russell Crowe helps redeem the clichés.

A double-sided DVD expands on that sense of history with a respectable set of extras that includes an interview with the fighter's son, and footage of the famous bout between Braddock and Max Baer paired with analysis from Howard, producer Brian Grazer, screenwriter Akiva Goldsman and writer/boxing enthusiast Norman Mailer. On the whole, "Cinderella Man" makes fully satisfying viewing.

Soul Producer

Joe Henry, indie star and champion of a great American genre

MULTITASKING | Singer-songwriter Joe Henry builds his detailed songs with folk and jazz atmospherics, and his music increasingly echoes the playful sounds of Tin Pan Alley.

He is an unlikely candidate to become a soul music champion. At least that was Henry's opinion of himself when Anti-/Epitaph president Andy Kaulkin asked him about producing an album for soul legend Solomon Burke.

"I'm not sure I was thought of as a real option for a producer," said Henry. "We had one conversation, and I just mouthed off a bit and said enough of the right things."

The resulting work, "Don't Give Up on Me," rejuvenated Burke's career, winning a Grammy for best contemporary blues album in 2002.

"I never wanted a traditional soul producer," Kaulkin says. "I liked the sound of [Henry's 2001 album] 'Scar.' It was organic, but still had an opaque, surreal quality that I thought Solomon's voice would go well with. It was modern and soulful at the same time."

At some point in 2006, Henry hopes to record his next solo album, but his plans for his own label, Work Song, a partnership between Starbucks Hear Music and Warner Music Group's Rhino Entertainment, may get in the way. The label's first release, "I Believe to My Soul," is a showcase for revered soul artists Toussaint, Mavis Staples, Ann Peebles, Irma Thomas and Preston.

Henry likens the project to the Ry Cooder-produced "Buena Vista Social Club," which in 1997 brought attention to a host of underappreciated Cuban musicians. He hopes to release a handful of soul projects each year through Work Song.

"The recording industry may have decided [these soul artists were] old news and nostalgic, but there's nothing that suggests the listening audience thinks that," Henry said.

As Henry works with more soul artists, he has taken to talking about his production role as a sort of mission. In the liner notes for "I Believe to My Soul," he laments the fact that the link between a Mavis Staples and a Mary J. Blige is seldom recognized. He goes on to argue that veteran soul practitioners are not as revered as classic rock stars.

"Elton John and Cream are selling out Madison Square Garden," Henry said, "and there's every reason to think in my mind that these artists are just as viable."

TODD MARTENS (BILLBOARD)

Smart Latin Drama Bows

Cecilia Roth in the dark police thriller.

In HBO Signature's 'Epitafios,' 'gripping' needs no translation

DEBUT | HBO Signature (available in most HBO homes) will begin airing the Spanish-language police thriller "Epitafios" (9 p.m., HBO Signature). Shot on location in Buenos Aires and presented with English subtitles, "Epitafios" is slick, stylish and gruesomely dark. Julio Chavez stars as a beleaguered police officer with no shortage of psychological baggage on the trail of a psychotic serial killer (Antonio Birabent) who uses his victim's body parts to leave a trail of gruesome messages. Not for the squeamish, "Epitafios" may shock even those who have grown used to the casual morbidity of "CSI." But fans of smart thrillers will find this Latin import gripping and addictive. SINO THE TIMES: MTV extends its reach — this time within the U.S. Yesterday, MTV World launched MTV Chi, catering to Chinese-Americans. The channel will be in English and showcase Mandarin rock and pop, Canto-pop, Chinese hip-hop and other genres.

The clever series 'Project Runway' sashays back to TV

RETURNS | Last year's breakout reality series "Project Runway" (10 p.m. and 11 p.m., Bravo) returns for a second season with back-to-back episodes. And I'm pleased to announce that it doesn't suffer from a sophomore slump.

I was a little worried that last season was a fluke, a product of too many memorable personalities. But unlike "The Apprentice," which seems to get duller with each passing season, "Runway" picks up where it left off, presenting an addictive combination of high-strung ambition and the pressure of creating under a deadline.

If you love this show, you'll have to catch both installments tonight. The second competition concludes with an emotional meltdown that borders on disturbing. In other words, perfect reality television.

The only thing I'll say about the new group is that the 16 designers include one familiar face. Daniel Franco was the first to be eliminated last season.

The self-assured and completely pretentious Franco returns for a chance at redemption. Is he a good designer or just a glutton for punishment? You'll just have to tune in to find out. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

ON TV TONIGHT

YOU'RE GONNA BE A STAR! OR NOT
The new six-part weekly series GOING HOLLYWOOD (9 p.m., TLC) follows three young interns trying to make it in the fantasy capital.

FESTIVELY FEDERAL
Host Joan Steffend joins First Lady Laura Bush on THE WHITE HOUSE CHRISTMAS 2005 (8 p.m., HGTV). Bush provides a grand tour of the historic home.

YOU MIGHT SAY IT SOUNDS ABSOLUTELY FABULOUS
Considered outrageous in Australia, the sitcom KATH & KIM (9 p.m., Sundance) is the No. 1-rated show Down Under. Presented like a reality show, it follows the fortysomething Kath (Jane Turner), who has embraced her empty-nest status with hedonistic gusto, and her spoiled daughter, Kim (Gina Riley).

'BUT MOM!' Kath is happy to be alone, but daughter Kim gets in the way.

CULT CHOICE
An unfeeling dentist (Kirstie Alley) is reincarnated as the Tooth Fairy in the 1997 made-for-cable comedy TOOTHLESS (8 p.m., Disney). KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Resorts in Caribbean, Florida are booking up fast for winter

With Cancun still recovering from a brutal hurricane season, there's a crunch for hotel rooms in warm-weather destinations this holiday season.

Although almost half of Cancun's 27,700 rooms are expected to be reopened by mid-December, tourists are trying to crowd in elsewhere throughout the Caribbean, Florida — and even as far as Hawaii.

With occupancy up, so are prices. At the Hyatt Regency Coral Gables in Florida, demand has risen between 15 percent and 25 percent from last year, and rates are about 7 percent higher. Martineau Bay Resort & Spa on the island of Vieques in Puerto Rico has seen a 20 percent bump in bookings after Hurricane Wilma hit in late Oct. The Atlantis Paradise Island

Resort in the Bahamas has picked up several large groups that were displaced from Cancun and now has 10 percent more leisure traffic than usual this December. Prices are up about 4 percent. Travelocity has seen big increases in holiday season bookings to destinations that rival Cancun — including 30 percent more to Maui compared to last year, over 50 percent more to Jamaica and 32 percent more to Tucson, Ariz.

Contributing to the crunch is the fact that — even before the fallout from Cancun — peak-season luxury travel has never been busier and room rates for the coveted spots are approaching all-time highs.

Higher operating costs at hotels, particularly for utilities, are also pushing prices higher. Furthermore, only 81 percent of Grand Cayman's hotel rooms have

The Cancun Convention and Visitors Bureau estimates that two-thirds of Cancun's rooms will reopen by the summer. Most of the hotel rooms in the Mayan Riviera have already reopened, and most of Cozumel's rooms are expected to be ready for visitors by February.

Still, Marie Cerletty, a 45-year-old part-time writer from Chevy Chase, Md., is switching her plans to travel to Cancun with her family over the Martin Luther King Day holiday in mid-January. She's booked the vacation at Acapulco instead. Cerletty looked around at resorts in the reopened following a devastating 2004 hurricane season, and much of New Orleans remains off-limits to holiday-makers.

But many travelers remain wary of what they will find. The Cancun airport has reopened, but airlines continue to fly reduced schedules and United Airlines service is completely suspended through mid-December. Cruise ships are calling on Cozumel again but passengers need to be ferried to land because the docks remain under construction. Cozumel roads are clear except for a small strip on the island's east side, which should reopen on Dec. 15. Electricity is back and some

There were some rooms here and there but the airfare was prohibitive," she said. AVERY JOHNSON (THE WALL STREET JOURNAL)

Kids Behaving Badly

Parenting

Some businesses insist that children show good manners

Dan McCauley had seen one too many kids at his Chicago cafe lying on the floor in front of the counter, careening off the glass pastry case, coming perilously close to getting their fingers pinched in the front door. So he posted a sign: "Children of all ages have to behave and use their indoor voices."

To him, it was a simple reminder to parents to keep an eye on their children and set some limits. But to some parents in his North Side Chicago neighborhood, the sign may as well have read, "If you have kids, you're not welcome."

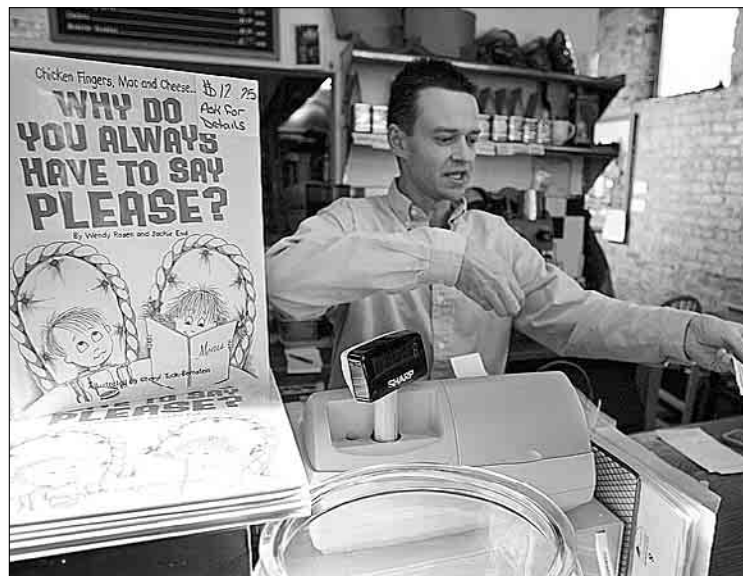

That one little notice, adorned

"It's not about the kids. It's about the parents who are with them. Are they supervising and guiding them?"

DAN MCCAULEY
OWNER, A TASTE OF HEAVEN CAFE

with pastel hand prints, has become a lightning rod in a larger debate over parenting and misbehaving children.

"It's not about the kids," said McCauley, the 44-year-old owner of A Taste of Heaven cafe, who has no children but claims to like them a lot. "It's about the parents who are with them. Are they supervising and guiding them? I'm just asking that they are considerate to people around them."

At the Taste of Heaven cafe, workers insist that children behave in the store.

While he has created some enemies in his neighborhood, McCauley has received hundreds of calls and more than 600 letters, the overwhelming majority of them supportive. One letter-writer from Alabama typed out in bold letters: "In my opinion, you're a hero!"

While it is common policy for upscale restaurants to bar children, owners of other types of businesses also are setting limits on kids.

The Wynn Hotel in Las Vegas, for instance, does not allow visitors who aren't guests to have strollers; hotel officials say it is to prevent crashes with other pedestrians. The Bellagio Hotel does not take guests younger than 18 without special permission.

Some parents are fine with the limit-setting and complain that too many of their peers take their kids to places traditionally meant for adults, such as late-night movies and rock concerts.

Still, while they agree that some parents push the boundaries too far, other weary parents feel under siege — and misunderstood.

"Don't get me wrong. As a parent, I have an arsenal that includes the deadly stare, loss of privileges and 'We're going back to the car, RIGHT NOW!'" said Angela Toda, a 38-year-old mother of two small children in College Park, Md. "But the bottom line is, there are certain moments that all kids and parents have — and sometimes your kid is going to lose it in a public place."

ZENMOMMA is a new, scarily thorough line of pregnancy and childhood beauty products. The citrus-scented Belly and Body Oil Mist ($17, zenmomma.com) wards off something called "itchy belly," an assertion we could not test. The Brown Sugar Body Scrub ($19) should not be allowed to come in contact with skin, as it smells of rotting apples. Maybe it's to prepare mom for the World of Smells a baby brings? K.P.K.

PEEVES OF THE PROS ►► JOHN NICHOLAS PETRO, NICHOLAS CHIMNEY STOVE & FIREPLACE IN VIENNA, VA.

Please Stop ... Blocking Your Fireplace's Chi. "Oftentimes people blunder into a good fire," said Petro. "But they don't understand the invisible forces at play." Before starting a fire (and after opening the flue), make sure air is traveling up, not down, through the chimney. Hold a smoldering match inside your fireplace; if the smoke climbs skyward, you're all set. If not, "quill up a newspaper and hold the burning end up into the damper area — this should reverse the flow," said Petro. No? Try cracking open the doors and windows so air can flow into the house and up the chimney. You can close them once the fire's roaring. SARA ATWATER (EXPRESS)

This Beholder Needs Glasses

I like to socialize with women who are above average in appearance, but I seldom ask them out. I'm intimidated by them and worry that they have high standards for the men who ask them for dates. If I settle for asking out average-looking, how do I get adjusted to that kind of pursuit? Should I — and if so, when — let women know my opinion of their appearance? — ANONYMOUS, D.C.

Oh, yes, definitely let the “average”-looking women know where they fall short. Nothing spells romance like a detailed analysis of one's excema.

Let me get this straight — you're socializing with attractive women but are afraid to ask them out. Unless by “socializing” you mean peeking through their windows with a telescope, these women obviously find your company acceptable. What makes you think the world would come crashing down if you make a move? Besides, is there really that much physical difference between the men women consider friends versus the men they'd consider seeing an overpriced movie with?

Of course, for some women, yes. And these are the women you wouldn't want to date anyway — the ones so caught up in appearances that they strictly segregate their social lives. Most women worth dating find friendship to be a great starting point for romance, and that's where the high standards come in: for you to be a good guy. Take reasonable care of your appearance and you won't be laughed off if you ask for a date.

Unless, of course, they're picking up on the segregating that you seem to be doing. Which brings me back to the whole “good guy” idea. Your thoughts about “settling” for an average-looking woman make me wonder if you're looking for the validation of arm candy rather than a real relationship. People see that a mile away, and it's uglier than an unlanced boil.

So start asking out women whose company you enjoy, simple as that. Don't take the laser pointer to their faces. After all, if a spark catches fire, that pointy chin — formerly considered an imperfection — might be a quirk you fall in love with.

I misled a friend of mine into thinking I have feelings for her. In fact, I'm in love with her sister and she's in love with me, too. How do I tell her? — D.C. DILEMMA

Um, you acknowledge that you did something wrong that hurt someone, and you apologize. Falsely leading someone on — sister drama or no sister drama — is a crime punishable by at least a few weeks of guilt, an obligation to be honest and apologetic, and enough self-exploration to understand why it happened in the first place. Your “friend” might not want to play nice with you for a while, and you've got to accept that. Oh, and you might want to banish duplicity and manipulation from your repertoire — otherwise I fear a grim fate for you and Sis Number Two.

Hitting the Mark on Metro

I WAS SHOCKED AT WHY METRO hesitated to mark arrows on its platforms; it is afraid of complaints when it fails to stop a train at the right place. Around the world, it is very common for trains to stop at a designated place. I wonder why a country which succeeded in landing on the moon suffers from such a tiny trouble?

Enlightenment is coming; you must be prepared to receive it. Expect the greatest lesson to be mysterious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Put yourself in another's shoes, and you'll likely realize that your recent behavior has been a help to no one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) The time has come to put away those preformed notions and outdated ideas about the world. Start seeing things anew.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You have in abundance what it takes to help a friend in need — don't wait to be asked.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're likely to find yourself in a head-to-head contest with someone who equals you in vision and willpower.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're not one to tolerate roadblocks. You want action — fast and furious. But don't overdo it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You've been saving money or effort for a day like today. Now is the time to gamble on that a winning proposition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Consider taking up a friend on an unusual offer. Embrace the eccentricity as a golden opportunity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone is watching out for you, but that's no reason to risk life and limb at every turn. Be responsible, too.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Put your fears on a back burner and trust the voices that say, “Do it.” Someone is waiting for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You will be intrigued by people who behave dramatically different than you. Steer clear of obvious dangers.

OH, PLEASE You Don't Sue the Water For Being Wet, Do You?

The producer of the Live 8 concerts filed suit against Trimspa Inc. in Los Angeles this past week, claiming that Live 8 Productions' reputation was damaged by the Trimspa spokeswoman

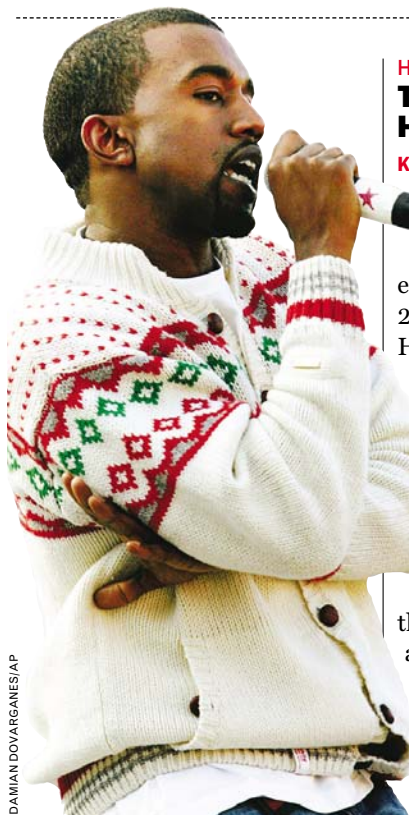

ANNA NICOLE SMITH's attire and conduct during a televised concert in July. Live 8 is seeking more than $500,000 in compensatory damages (claiming Trimspa failed to pay for a handful of promotional spots), plus unspecified damages for Smith's behavior. Smith appeared "intoxicated and scantily clad in revealing attire completely inappropriate for a broadcast that would be seen by millions," the lawsuit said. Smith was not drunk and brought a back-up outfit with her, but was told not to change, said her lawyer, Howard K. Stern. (AP)

HIGH SCHOOL Teachers Despair of Ever Holding Attention Again

KANYE WEST's first album is titled "The College Dropout" and his lyrics often extoll the benefits of a real-world education. But Monday found the 27-year-old rapper at Santa Monica High School, performing a rousing six-song set after students won a local radio contest. "Me? I use real life, I learn from real people," West said while waiting to go onstage. "The great thing about school, and the bad thing about it, is that you can just sit there in the back of the room and not pay any attention." He stopped mid-set to take questions, including one about his high-school grades. "I didn't do a lot of homework," West said. "But I got a lot of A's and B's." (AP)
